While we can none of us claim a total exemption from the greatest of all ills to which flesh is heir—ill health, we may do much to lessen the chances of incurring it, and this not alone by the adoption o such sanitary measures as are to be found in daily exercise, regular hours prudence in esting and drinking, and wholesome diet, but also resorting to judicious preventive medication wher the system is threatened by unhealthfu influences. For instance, residents of sojourners in malarious localities should use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a defense against chills and fever, and persons who incur much out-of-door exposure should employ it as a safeguard against rheumatism. Travelers in the tropics find it invaluable also as a eans of arresting liver complaint and constinution, and counteracting the de oilitating influence of a torrid climate.
